SENATE INVESTIGATING SOFT COAL FIELDS

OVER-DEVELOPING THE INDUSTRY IS DEPLORABLE ONE

PRESIDENT JOHN L. LEWIS OF UNITED MINE WORKERS IN CONFERENCE

SENATE INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMITTEE HOLDING HEARINGS

By KENNETH CRAWFORD (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, March 7.—(UP)—Over-development of the bituminous coal industry is responsible for its present deplorable condition, President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, told the senate interstate commerce committee.

Lewis was the first witness at the committee's investigation of charges that railroads and mine operators have conspired to destroy the United Mine Workers, that injunctions against miners have been misused, and that private police have mistreated miners and their families. The committee room was crowded to overflowing as the hearings started. Secretary of Labor Davis was among the spectators.

"Although the industry always has been cursed with over-development," Lewis said, "the war period accentuated the over-development. Almost 4,000 mines were added to aggravate the situation during the period from 1916 to 1921.

"The United Mine Workers have served as the only stabilizing force that the bituminous coal industry has ever known. When union wages and working conditions prevailed in the major portion of the industry, the equalized wage rates stabilized production costs and minimized cut throat competition."

Abrogation of the Jacksonville wage agreement by large mine operating companies in 1925, started the industry to the depths where it now finds itself, Lewis said. The Consolidated Coal Company, controlled by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was one of the first to repudiate its agreement, he told the committee.

"Following the strike of 1922, which resulted from an ill-advised attempt of the bituminous coal management to destroy the mine workers' union," Lewis said, "certain government agencies set to work to prevent another strike. The bituminous industry continued uninterrupted operation by renewing the wage agreement in 1923 and again renewing the wage pact in 1924, known as the Jacksonville wage agreement, which was made for a period of three years.

"The Jacksonville wage pact had the active support of government agencies anxious to promote peace within the industry, and eliminate excess mines and man-power."

Lewis said he appealed to the president for intervention again in 1925, but nothing was done then. He read a letter to President Coolidge dated Nov. 21, 1925, written, he said, after several of the large companies had broken their contract with the United Mine Workers, a contract which the government had promoted.

Lewis read the president's reply, deploring abrogation of contracts but refusing to intervene. President Coolidge suggested that the miners take their case to the courts or to congress.

Lewis departed from his prepared statement frequently to answer questions, on one of which occasions he denounced the practice of operators in "passing on to the miners the cost of uneconomic processes by reducing wages."

CRITICISM OF HIS FLIGHTS IS WARMLY RESENTED

PUBLIC KNOWS SO LITTLE ABOUT FLYING, SAY LINDBERGH'S FRIENDS

THE LONE EAGLE IS SO PROFICIENT THAT CRITICISM SEEMS RIDICULOUS

By FOSTER EATON (United Press Staff Correspondent)

St. Louis, Mo., March 7.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh wants the public to have confidence in his ability to fly without taking unnecessary risks, Major William B. Robertson, a friend and his former air mail employer, said today.

"The public in general knows so little about flying—and he knows so much," Robertson told the United Press, "that criticism of his flights seems ridiculous to him. He goes safely or he doesn't go."

Robertson, a veteran pilot himself, contributed his bit of confidence in the "lone eagle" by saying:

"If 'Slim' thought conditions were right I would never hesitate a minute even though personally I might doubt the wisdom of a given flight. He uses his head."

Lindbergh has dedicated his life to the advancement of aeronautics, Robertson continued.

"It would break his heart to be land-bound now by a lot of well-meaning but misinformed persons, who fear for his personal safety—in which he has the keenest interest of anyone alive."

"He uses excellent judgment. He takes to the air only after careful analysis of conditions he will meet on each flight."

Robertson was asked about the colonel's recent night flight to Washington.

"I didn't particularly like the idea, but the moon was as bright as a dim sun and actually cast shadows. It was light enough to find any field."

Robertson scoffed into the background the rumor that Lindbergh was "all tired out and going to Johns Hopkins hospital for a complete rest."

"The idea is simply ridiculous," he said. "I flew with him from here to Boston and back since Washington's birthday, and I know it was a real vacation for him. He is in the best of health."

"He is tired of only one thing, and that is being met as a leading citizen everywhere he goes now. He believes that period has passed, and that he ought to be permitted more privacy."

Lindbergh would rather fly than eat, Robertson said.

"He has frequently told me so and I believe him. He thoroughly enjoys himself then, and I believe he actually rests while flying. He is away from crowds then, and he loves to be alone."

Robertson would not discuss Lindbergh's major future plans, with which he indicated he was conversant.

"I expect he may be in the east two or three weeks or a month," he said. "He carried a large suitcase of personal effects and probably will remain until a medal is conferred by the president later this month."

ROBBERY BELIEVED MOTIVE IN MURDER

Des Moines, March 7.—(UP)—Robbery was the motive, police believed today, for the murder of Mrs. George Smith, 82, whose body was found by neighbors who went to the rescue when her home burned.

The marauder shot the aged woman and then set fire to the house, it was believed. Smith, husband of the victim, was not at home. He said he often kept large sums of money in the house.

EYE WITNESS STORY OF DEATH OF EDITH CAVELL

NURSE WHO GAVE HER LIFE FOR HER COUNTRY DURING THE WORLD WAR

GERMAN FIRING SQUAD EXECUTED HER FOR HELPING WAR PRISONERS ESCAPE

EDITOR'S NOTE—The following article by Frederick Kuh, United Press staff correspondent, contains the first complete eye-witness account of the heroic death before a German firing squad of Nurse Edith Cavell, who gave her life for her country during the world war. Dr. Gottfried Benn, German army medical officer detailed to witness the execution, describes in detail the manner of her execution, and corrects the many conflicting versions that have gone before.

by FREDERICK KUH (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Berlin, March 7.—The death before a German firing squad of Edith Cavell, British world war nurse, was described for the first time in all its dramatic detail today by the German doctor who witnessed her execution for helping war prisoners to escape.

"A brave daughter of a great nation," the army physician—Dr. Gottfried Benn—called Miss Cavell in telling the story in the newspaper Acht-Uhr-Abendblatt.

He told how she walked unflinchingly to the execution place, said she was glad to die for England, and received twelve bullets in her heart and lungs.

Dr. Benn broke a ten-year silence to help clear up the controversy that followed the banning, by the British government, of a motion picture film purporting to describe Miss Cavell's execution. The view was taken that the portrayal would revive feelings between Britons and Germans.

Dr. Benn was medical officer at the German headquarters in Brussels during the war. He attended, in an official capacity, both the trial and execution of the British nurse. After she had fallen before the bullets of the firing squad, it was his duty to examine her body and certify her death.

This is the story:

"I received orders to go by motor car to a destination known only to the chauffeur. At dawn, we arrived at the shooting range at Brussels, where a company of infantry lined a path leading to the wall where two platoons of twelve men each—the firing parties—were waiting.

"We waited for some time and then another car arrived in which was a Belgian engineer named Broque who had been sentenced to die for complicity in the Cavell case.

"Broque nonchalantly went to a place indicated to him, and, standing between two white poles, doffed his cap to the firing squad drawn up before him. He bade them 'Good morning' and then said:

"In the face of death, we are comrades."

"The officer in charge of the firing party, fearing that the man was going to make a provocative speech, interrupted. Broque then stood silent and erect.

"Another car arrived in which were Nurse Cavell and a priest. She was dressed in a blue tailor-made costume with a small hat. Her face was like a mask. Her gait was staggering owing to muscular impediment, but she nevertheless walked without hesitation towards the place between the two poles where the Belgian stood.

"She stopped for a moment to tell the priest:

"I am glad to be dying for England. Other women are sacrificing more—husbands, brothers, sons. I have only my own life to give."

"She asked the priest to send a last message from her to her mother and to her brothers who were serving with the British army in France.

"The final scenes were over quickly. The firing squad presented arms and the military judge read the ver-

CANADIAN GEESE ARE WINGING THEIR WAY NORTHWARD

Warroad, Minn., March 7.—(UP)—Despite the zero temperatures which prevailed here the fore part of the week, several flocks of Canadian geese were seen winging their way northward. This lead to the belief by weather prognosticators that an early spring was in store for the northwest. Only one time in the memory of Warroad's oldest citizens have the birds flown north this early in the year. That was in the late '80's they said. An unusually early spring came that year, the watchers said.

SOUTHERN DRY FORCES PLAN ACTIVE AID

WILL STAND BACK OF DRY OFFICE SEEKERS OF THE SOUTH

PROHIBITION CONFERENCE WAS HELD AT ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 7.—(UP)—Southern dry forces today planned active aid for dry office seekers after the meeting of the Southern States Prohibition Conference.

Prominent dry leaders, including Ernest H. Cherrington of the World League Against Alcoholism, spoke. Cherrington warned especially against election of wet members of congress.

"All forms of government insist on certain rights, but the eighteenth amendment is a new departure in government in that it works for the protection of the rights of everyone, protecting them against anti-social groups and minorities," Cherrington said.

F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, told the conference that if Governor Alfred Smith of New York was nominated by the democrats as a presidential candidate, the democratic party would be set back a quarter of a century. C. M. Ledbetter, Georgia prohibition leader, said Georgia would go republican by 50,000 majority if Smith was nominated.

"There is need to work constantly against liquor propaganda," former State Senator W. A. Frost of Kentucky told the conference.

dict of the court which had found the accused guilty. Both the Englishwoman and the Belgian were blindfolded and each was tied to a pole.

"At a single word of command, both platoons fired from a distance of a couple of yards. Broque's body sagged, but for a few moments the Englishwoman remained upright. Like the Belgian, however, she had been killed instantaneously, receiving 12 bullets which had pierced her heart and lungs.

"It is untrue that she received the coup de grace (a finishing shot from an officer's pistol fired when there is doubt regarding death).

"I immediately went to the pole to which her body was tied and felt for her pulse. When I found that she was dead, I closed her eyes.

"I assisted in placing her in a small yellow coffin. She was immediately interred at a place which had been kept secret.

"I am not attempting to correct the legend which has grown up around Nurse Cavell. I want only to tell what I remember; and I remember her as an active woman who paid for her deeds as a brave daughter of a great nation."

Of Miss Cavell's trial, Dr. Benn said that he heard Miss Cavell admit that the organization she had formed to help "the enemy"—the allies—had smuggled 300 soldiers and Belgian civilians across the Dutch frontier.

Dr. Benn added that, although she was betrayed by various accomplices at the trial, Nurse Cavell remained reserved and calm.

SEVERAL PERSONS REPORTED KILLED IN TWO TOWNS

HOUSES COLLAPSED IN VILLAGES OF PIZZA AND RADICENA

THE POPULATION AT CATANARO SPENT THE NIGHT IN THE OPEN

Rome, March 7.—(UP)—An earthquake today rocked the city and province of Cosenza, causing panic among the population but little damage.

Earth shocks that did no damage were felt in the area between Catania and Siracusa.

Several persons were reported to have been killed in the towns of Pizza and Radicena, where some houses collapsed.

Shocks were felt at Catanzaro, but did no damage to person or property. The population was spending the night in the open.

A sharp 10-second shock was felt at Messina at 11:56 A. M., the strongest since the one that levelled the town to the ground in 1908. Many houses were damaged, but no casualties were reported. Inhabitants were panic-stricken.

Shocks at Reggio Calabria caused a few cracks to appear in buildings. The towns of Bagnara and Palmi, in Reggio Calabria province, suffered damage.

News from other towns in the province is scarce.

IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST COWS HAVE GOLD TEETH

CATTLE BUYER DISCOVERS 8 BOVINES SPORTING GOLDEN MOLARS

SCIENTIFIC MYSTERY CREATED BY SHEER UNUSUALNESS OF CASE

Portland, Ore., March 7.—(UP)—In mythological Greece lambs had golden fleeces. In fairland geese laid golden eggs. And in the Pacific northwest cows have golden teeth.

"If you don't believe it, take a look at these," said Bert Edwards, prominent Salem, Ore., cattle buyer, today, the while he pulled a handful of gold-plated bovine molars from his trouser pocket.

Edwards recently bought eight heads of cattle in the Portland stockyards. When they were slaughtered it was discovered that each of the cows had teeth covered with a shiny gilt substance.

Edwards rushed the teeth to a jeweler.

"Pure gold," he quoted the jeweler as saying.

That silenced the scoffers. But it also created a scientific mystery which never before in sheer unusualness has been equalled in this corner of the United States.

Edwards personally is of the opinion that the cows spent most of their lives grazing on a plain virtually carpeted with gold under the grass. Thus, in eating, according to his theory, the cows inadvertently got the gold in their mouths from time to time and the gold in some unexplained manner stuck to their teeth.

Examination disclosed the teeth all were in perfect condition. The gold covered them in a thin glittering layer.

Edwards bought the cattle from the stock firm of Kidwell & Caswell which originally obtained the animals from John Dechanbeau, of Star, Idaho.

So certain is he that he is right and that the cows got their teeth plated by chewing gold along with grass, that Edwards declared he would go immediately to Star to stake out a gold claim.

Picher, Okla., March 7.—(UP)—Tumbling 210 feet to the bottom of a mine shaft near here, Lucille Thomas, 22 months old, apparently was none the worse for her experience.

CONTINUE MARINE OCCUPATION OF NICARAGUA

SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE VOTES FAVORABLY

TAKES ISSUE WITH THE HEFLIN RESOLUTION SEEKING TO END OCCUPATION

Washington, March 7.—(UP)—The senate foreign relations committee voted unanimously today in favor of continuing the marine occupation of Nicaragua. The expression of policy was made in a decision directing Chairman Borah to report adversely to the senate the Heflin resolution which would have directed President Coolidge to withdraw the marines.

Borah declared later in a statement that the United States had sent marines to Nicaragua to guarantee a fair election and that the republican and democratic members of the committee believed the marines should remain until the election is held.

"Speaking for myself, I want to see us get out of Nicaragua and stay out," Borah said, "but I know of no way to do so decently and with justice to all parties except to hold that election."

LITHUANIAN LABORER FALLS INTO TRAP SET

WRITES TO FATHER DEMANDING $50,000 FOR NEWS OF THE GIRL

DECOY BUNDLE PLACED IN ANSWER, POLICE ARREST MAN

Northampton, Mass., March 7.—(UP)—A Lithuanian laborer, father of three children, is held here after falling into a trap set for the possible kidnaper of Miss Frances St. John Smith, missing Smith college freshman.

Michael Buinickas, a spinner in the Belding mills, was arrested last night when he called at the post office for a decoy bundle placed there in answer to a $50,000 ransom demand.

Postal inspectors who made the arrest, said Buinickas hired a post office box under a fictitious name and wrote to St. John Smith, wealthy father of the girl who disappeared from her Smith college dormitory here last January 13, demanding $50,000 in exchange for news of his daughter.

Under questioning at police headquarters, Buinickas admitted hiding the box under the name of M. Klunsky three days before Miss Smith vanished.

The fact the Lithuanian hired the box before the disappearance lead authorities to believe he might have some knowledge of the mystery, although police said today they believed he merely was endeavoring to capitalize the situation.

Buinickas will be arraigned at Springfield today before United States Commissioner E. W. Gordon on a charge of using the mails in an attempt to defraud.

"There is need to work constantly against liquor propaganda," former State Senator W. A. Frost of Kentucky told the conference.

dict of the court which had found the accused guilty. Both the Englishwoman and the Belgian were blindfolded and each was tied to a pole.

"At a single word of command, both platoons fired from a distance of a couple of yards. Broque's body sagged, but for a few moments the Englishwoman remained upright. Like the Belgian, however, she had been killed instantaneously, receiving 12 bullets which had pierced her heart and lungs."

"It is untrue that she received the coup de grace (a finishing shot from an officer's pistol fired when there is doubt regarding death)."

"I immediately went to the pole to which her body was tied and felt for her pulse. When I found that she was dead, I closed her eyes."

"I assisted in placing her in a small yellow coffin. She was immediately interred at a place which had been kept secret."

"I am not attempting to correct the legend which has grown up around Nurse Cavell. I want only to tell what I remember; and I remember her as an active woman who paid for her deeds as a brave daughter of a great nation."

Of Miss Cavell's trial, Dr. Benn said that he heard Miss Cavell admit that the organization she had formed to help "the enemy"—the allies—had smuggled 360 soldiers and Belgian civilians across the Dutch frontier.

Dr. Benn added that, although she was betrayed by various accomplices at the trial, Nurse Cavell remained reserved and calm.

THE POPULATION AT CATANARO SPENT THE NIGHT IN THE OPEN

Earth shocks that did no damage were felt in the area between Catania and Siracusa.

Several persons were reported to have been killed in the towns of Pizza and Radicena, where some houses collapsed.

Shocks were felt at Catanzaro, but did no damage to person or property. The population was spending the night in the open.

A sharp 10-second shock was felt at Messina at 11:56 A. M., the strongest since the one that levelled the town to the ground in 1908. Many houses were damaged, but no casualties were reported. Inhabitants were panic-stricken.

Shocks at Reggio Calabria caused a few cracks to appear in buildings. The towns of Bagnara and Palmi, in Reggio Calabria province, suffered damage.

IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST COWS HAVE GOLD TEETH

CATTLE BUYER DISCOVERS 80 VINES SPORTING GOLDEN MOLARS

SCIENTIFIC MYSTERY CREATED BY SHEER UNUSUALNESS OF CASE

Portland, Ore., March 7.—(UP)—In mythological Greece lambs had golden fleeces. In fairland geese laid golden eggs. And in the Pacific northwest cows have golden teeth.

"If you don't believe it, take a look at these," said Bert Edwards, prominent Salem, Ore., cattle buyer, today, the while he pulled a handful of gold-plated bovine molars from his trouser pocket.

Edwards recently bought eight head of cattle in the Portland stockyards. When they were slaughtered it was discovered that each of the cows had teeth covered with a shiny gilt substance.

Edwards rushed the teeth to a jeweler.

"Pure gold," he quoted the jeweler as saying.

That silenced the scoffers. But it also created a scientific mystery which never before in sheer unusualness has been equalled in this corner of the United States.

Edwards personally is of the opinion that the cows spent most of their lives grazing on a plain virtually carpeted with gold under the grass. Thus, in eating, according to his theory, the cows inadvertently got the gold in their mouths from time to time and the gold in some unexplained manner stuck to their teeth.

Examination disclosed the teeth all were in perfect condition. The gold covered them in a thin glittering layer.

Edwards bought the cattle from the stock firm of Kidwell & Caswell which originally obtained the animals from John Dechanbeau, of Star, Idaho.

So certain is he that he is right and that the cows got their teeth plated by chewing gold along with grass, that Edwards declared he would go immediately to Star to stake out a gold claim.

TAKES ISSUE WITH THE HEFLIN RESOLUTION SEEKING TO END OCCUPATION

Washington, March 7.—(UP)—The senate foreign relations committee voted unanimously today in favor of continuing the marine occupation of Nicaragua. The expression of policy was made in a decision directing Chairman Borah to report adversely to the senate the Heflin resolution which would have directed President Coolidge to withdraw the marines.

Borah declared later in a statement that the United States had sent marines to Nicaragua to guarantee a fair election and that the republican and democratic members of the committee believed the marines should remain until the election is held.

"Speaking for myself, I want to see us get out of Nicaragua and stay out," Borah said, "but I know of no way to do so decently and with justice to all parties except to hold that election."

LITHUANIAN LABORER FALLS INTO TRAP SET

WRITES TO FATHER DEMANDING $50,000 FOR NEWS OF THE GIRL

DECOY BUNDLE PLACED IN ANSWER, POLICE ARREST MAN

Northampton, Mass., March 7.—(UP)—A Lithuanian laborer, father of three children, is held here after falling into a trap set for the possible kidnaper of Miss Frances St. John Smith, missing Smith college freshman.

Michael Buinickas, a spinner in the Belding mills, was arrested last night when he called at the post office for a decoy bundle placed there in answer to a $50,000 ransom demand.

Postal inspectors, who made the arrest, said Buinickas hired a post office box under a fictitious name and wrote to St. John Smith, wealthy father of the girl who disappeared from her Smith college dormitory here last January 13, demanding $50,000 in exchange for news of his daughter.

Under questioning at police headquarters, Buinickas admitted hiring the box under the name of M. Klunsky three days before Miss Smith vanished.

The fact the Lithuanian hired the box before the disappearance lead authorities to believe he might have some knowledge of the mystery, although police said today they believed he merely was endeavoring to capitalize the situation.

Buinickas will be arraigned at Springfield today before United States Commissioner E. W. Gordon on a charge of using the mails in an attempt to defraud.

Heffner, of the M. & I. general office in this city, was mentioned as the proper man to be placed in command of Company F. Captain Nelson and Lieutenant Wilkins have resigned. A novel experience and one which will prove very valuable in this city in the future, was tried last night by Superintendent Peterson of the electric light plant and resulted very successfully.

The water main on Laurel street was frozen up and it was thought that the water main would have to be dug for about a block, but Supt. Peterson suggested that electricity be used and a wire was attached to the hydrant at one end of the block and to the pipe beneath the ground at the other end. In just one hour and a half the pipes were thawed out. It took just 40,000 volts to do the job. It is a four inch main.

Nate Barber, a former old time Brainerdite, has returned from Walla Walla, Wash., and expects to make his home in this city again. His son accompanied him here.

The Spirit of Service

In July, 1926, lightning struck the Navy Arsenal at Denmark Lake, New Jersey. The explosion demolished the $80,000,000 plant, rocked the countryside, left thousands homeless and many dead.

High upon the roster of those who responded to the call of duty were the telephone workers. Operators in danger zone stayed at their posts. Others, on their own initiative, hurried back to help. Linemen and repairmen braved exploding shells to restore the service. No telephone worker left the affected area.

Through the twenty-four hours of the day as well as in every emergency it is the spirit of service that causes Bell System employees to set aside all thought of personal comfort and safety and, voluntarily, risk their lives to "Get the message through."

The Spirit of Service

IN JULY, 1926, lightning struck the Navy Arsenal at Denmark Lake, New Jersey. The explosion demolished the $80,000,000 plant, rocked the countryside, left thousands homeless and many dead.

High upon the roster of those who responded to the call of duty were the telephone workers. Operators in danger zone stayed at their posts. Others, on their own initiative, hurried back to help. Linemen and repairmen braved exploding shells to restore the service. No telephone worker left the affected area.

Through the twenty-four hours of the day as well as in every emergency it is the spirit of service that causes Bell System employees to set aside all thought of personal comfort and safety and, voluntarily, risk their lives to "Get the message through."

CRIPPLING HIS WINGS

UNDER the heading, "Crippling His Wings," the New Republic of February 29 discusses efforts made to check the flying of the lone eagle, Col. Lindbergh, in this manner:

Ever since Lindbergh landed at Bourget Field, this country has given a perfect demonstration of the kind of parent who ruins his child's life with too much love. Lindbergh made the flight to Paris on his own responsibility. He got the backing himself, he even put his own money into it. His countrymen did nothing to help him.

But from the moment that he arrived at Paris, he became ours. Like a doting parent to whom his child's daring has been hitherto mere recklessness, but who, as soon as that daring has been crowned with success, wants to use it to redound to his—the parent's—prestige, this country pounced upon Lindbergh, as he came off the field of victory, put its arms possessively about him, smothered him with a mixture of pride, love and parental managing, and did everything in its power to destroy the very qualities that it adores in him.

For example, Lindbergh lands in France. He is young, he has never been to Europe. He loves flying. He has promised himself the fun of seeing Europe in his own way, i. e., by flying from one country to another. Do we let him do it? We do not.

We take charge of him and put him through a series of official dinners and receptions that gives him about as much chance to see Europe as though he were in a Pullman car with the curtains drawn. And all this in order to redound to our credit. He is no longer permitted to be himself. He is US personified. He is the United States. In effect, we say, "See! This is the kind of person we are!" And then, to cap the climax, we bring him home in a battleship! Lindbergh would have preferred to come back in an ocean liner. Any boy would, on his first trip to Europe. One's first trip on an ocean liner is a great adventure—the novelty of it, the many people of all kinds and conditions, floating for a week in a tiny, compact, variegated world of their own on the great Atlantic. And, instead of that, to be put on a gray battleship with a collection of people all of the same stripe, in a kind of ship that has about as much relation to life of the sea as a Ford factory has! We might as well have put him in a pneumatic tube and shot him across the Atlantic!

And then when we got him on this side, we continued to play the doting parent. He had to perform for the folks. We made him ride on the covered top of an automobile through miles and miles of yelling crowds—this boy who evidently hates publicity and indiscriminate hullabaloo. How much he hates it was revealed by a recent incident in Washington. As he walked up the path to the White House, some Babbitt in the crowd rushed out and slapped him on the back. And Lindbergh frowned. Yes, actually. He did not smile and hold out the glad hand in good American salesmanship or political style. He frowned. It was a peculiarly appropriate frown. That is what, in effect, the United States has been doing for months. It has been saying, "You see, I am not the cheap, pushing, vulgar salesman that you have been thinking I am. Look at Lindbergh!" It is really pathetic. Evidently we have been very sore on that point. And evidently we have enough sensibility left to wish to be something else. Just like the parent who finds his son admired for qualities which he does not have.

So we send him to Mexico and South American countries to prove to them that we are not what they think us.

Finally, in recompense for doing all these things which he did not want to do, someone in Washington has drawn the perfect inference. He is so precious to this nation that it must deprive him of the right to do the one thing that he wants to do—fly where and when and how he chooses! That certainly completes the circle. His life is so valuable that it must be preserved as an inspiration to the youth of the land! How long does the proponent of this absurd proposal think that Lindbergh would remain an inspiration to the youth of the nation if he yielded to such an unjustifiable infringement of his liberty? For youth, unlike parents of the old-fashioned type, really does love daring, courage, devotion to something greater than one's own life, is bored with all the trappings of material success, as compared with the joy and thrill of an everlasting flight.

The past few months must have been a rather steadily growing series of disillusionments for Lindbergh. Continued long enough, this sort of thing always means that the parent loses the love of his son. Every parent and every adult with any sensitiveness has suffered from that clear-eyed, cool appraisal of youth in regard to adult activities, and the gradual loss of their respect. It is not a pleasant experience. Rationalizations never help. For example, those who would restrict Lindbergh's flying activities in this country—"he mustn't go flying over those dangerous jungles"—are acting exactly like the parent who says to his child, "But why should you want to swim in the river when there is that nice, shallow creek near by to swim in?" The river is dangerous, and it has rapids, and what would I do if you got drowned? Father and mother love you too much to let you do that."

This country needs to take a lesson from Lindbergh's own mother, and leave him alone to live his own life. Let him fly—when and where and how he chooses.

PENNEY TO SPEND $2,000,000 IN 1928

ACCORDING to the Northwest Publisher and Printer, most northwest publishers will be interested in knowing that the 1928 advertising budget of the J. C. Penney Company will total about $2,000,000.

This is the amount that has been set aside for local advertising, practically all of which will be newspaper space.

According to R. L. Whitman, director of the advertising, the Penney company reports that they have found local advertising to be very fruitful during the past year. The Penney chain now numbers nearly 1,000 stores.

There will also be an institutional campaign. This will be handled by the J. Walter Thompson Co., advertising agents of New York City. No amount has been decided as yet for the institutional campaign nor has the medium been chosen. Last year this list papers were chiefly used.

RESORT BOOKLETS

RESORT booklets should be ready for distribution early in the spring and orders should be in the hands of printers now. The Dispatch has every facility for printing fine booklets.

The Ten Thousand Lakes Association is anxious that Minnesota resorts publish more and better advertising booklets. Lists of inquiries are provided by the association. Last year this list contained 10,000 names, all good prospects.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

Richelieu

TYRANT and patriot, conspirator and foe to conspiracies, priest and man of blood, soldier and cardinal, great statesman and greater oppressor, generous patron of literature and personally a literary failure. These, in brief, are the chief characteristics of Armand Jean du Plessis, cardinal and Duke of Richelieu, the man who held all France in the hollow of his hand for a quarter century, and who did more than his share towards changing the destiny and history of the world.

Henry IV had quieted the quarrels between Catholics and Huguenots, had built up the nation that had been so severely battered by long civil war, and had paved the way for modern progress. But in the height of his career he had been murdered. His infant son, Louis XIII, succeeded him, and, during the lad's minority the queen mother, Marie de Medici, and the latter's Italian friends were in practical control. As a result, the great nobles waxed unduly powerful, arrogant and rebellious of royal command; abuses of many sorts crept into the state; the glorious realm built up by Henry IV threatened to weaken and fall prey to foreign influences.

When Louis XIII grew to manhood there seemed scant chance for betterment. He was weak, dissolute, lazy, stupid, with little thought or care for his country's best interests. It was at this critical moment that Richelieu appeared on the scene.

Richelieu had been educated for the army, but on his elder brother's death, in 1606, had become bishop of Lucon, at the age of twenty-one. But the church, except as its offices furthered his ambitions, held no attractions for the boy bishop. Far away, in Paris, glittered the gay court, and that court became his goal. Thither he went as clerical deputy for the states general, in 1614, and there he stayed. He won the interest of the queen mother, and by her influence was made secretary of state for war and foreign affairs. Barely had he begun his political climb when, owing to court politics, he was disgraced and banished from Paris. But in 1620 he returned, and two years later became cardinal. From thence on he was the foremost power in the state.

He set to work at once tearing to pieces France's dimly political fabric and remodeling it on a new basis. By execution, banishment and imprisonment he cut down the privileges and growing strength of the great nobles. He demolished their mighty fortresses and curtailed their feudal rights. The power thus snatched from them was added to the crown. Next he assailed the Huguenots, besieging the city of Rochelle, their stronghold and rallying place. England sent provisions to the besieged, but Richelieu cut off the supply, forcing a surrender.

By thus adding to the might of the crown and cutting away all forces that threatened to rival or weaken it, Richelieu was really strengthening himself. For he, and not the puppet, Louis XIII, was actual ruler of France. Having disposed of foes at home, Richelieu next moved to check the power of the Hapsburgs in Austria and Spain, aiding the German and Swedish Protestants in the Thirty Years' war, with a cheerful disregard to the fact that he had just tried to wreck Protestantism in France. It was also by his contrivance that Portugal, in 1640, separated from Spain.

Meantime, Louis XIII feared and hated Richelieu and would gladly have rid the earth of him had he been able to govern France without the cardinal's aid. But he could not get on without Richelieu, and it was pleasant, while leading an idle, dissipated life, to know another was making his kingdom the greatest in all Europe.

The nobles whose privileges the cardinal had curtailed, the soldiery and gallants whose duels he had forbidden on pain of death, the court and the king, all detested Richelieu. The queen mother, who had launched him in his career, turned against him. He wrecked her political power at one blow. The nobles again and again conspired to overthrow or assassinate him. He cut off the conspirators' heads. The clergy and parliament murmured at his tyranny. He put additional checks on them. Two noblemen, Cinq Mars and De Thou, plotted his downfall, and there can be little doubt King Louis was privy to their plot. Richelieu had the two executed, and the king dared not defend them.

With iron hand, relentlessly, arrogantly, yet ever wisely, this strange man swayed the destinies of France, making her powerful at home and terrible abroad, crushing out feudalism, building up a centralized royal power, conducting an incredibly brilliant foreign policy. He was an ardent patron of arts and culture and was author of some of the most poorly written poems and dramas of his day. Yet of these wretched literary efforts he is said to have been prouder than of his wondrous statecraft.

In December, 1642, he died, having placed France on a pinnacle of greatness that was the envy of the world. His puppet and dupe, Louis XIII, deprived of the man who had so long been his master and who had made his reign famous, died a few months later, leaving a son—Louis XIV—whose future greatness was largely due to the achievements of that relentless genius, Cardinal Richelieu, the man who was greater than the king.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

Von Moltke

"SIRE," said Napoleon III's minister of war, "all is in absolute readiness for the Prussian campaign. down to the last button on the last garter of the last soldier."

Now, this was one of the most monumental lies ever uttered.

Napoleon III was well aware that Europe distrusted him. He knew the French were naturally restless, that they had had a long era of military glory, and that a few years of humdrum peace might lead them to weary of him. So he went on the principle that a war every four years would keep them content, swell France's martial renown and make safe his own crown.

In the first decade of the Nineteenth century Napoleon the Great had crushed Prussia to the dust and humiliated her king. The son of that king was on the Prussian throne in 1870 and the great Napoleon's nephew ruled France.

Bismarck, Von Moltke and other Prussian statesmen had foreseen trouble with France and were well prepared for it, even if they did not (as many think) secretly bring about the conflict. France, on the other hand, was totally unready for any such clash. Prussia's revenge for the sixty-year-old injuries was at hand. The overt occasion of the Franco-Prussian war was as follows:

Queen Isabella of Spain was deposed. The Spanish crown was offered to Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern, a relative to King William of Prussia. Napoleon III at once declared that such selection would destroy the "balance of power" and leave France exposed to Prussian attack on east and south. He therefore demanded that Leopold's candidature be withdrawn. King William meekly obeyed. Utterly deceived by such submission, Napoleon went a step further and demanded a pledge from William that no Prussian prince should ever sit on the Spanish throne. William promptly refused to grant so absurd a request and publicly snubbed the ambassador who transmitted it. This was such an excuse as Napoleon had longed for. France at once declared war on Prussia (July 19, 1870) and rushed a body of troops to the German frontier.

So far, so good. But, owing to graft and incompetency, France's army was in wretched condition. Yet France went mad with patriotic zeal. The feats of the first Napoleon against Prussia were recalled. Everyone expected a triumphal march to the Prussian capital. The cry "On to Berlin!" was on all lips.

In contrast to this, Prussia's troops were in splendid preparation. The north and south German states (on many of which Napoleon III had been told he might rely for neutrality or even aid) unanimously joined Prussia, slaking interdecade grievances in a common cause; 477,000 men were mustered, as against France's 310,000. The German forces were divided into three armies, which at a signal crept unchecked across the Rhine like a huge three-headed snake, preceded by a cloud of Uhans, sweeping all before them and striking at France's very heart. King William was commander in chief, with Marshal von Moltke, the peerless tactician, as his chief of staff. The French armies, commanded by Napoleon III in person, made Metz their headquarters.

On August 2, part of Napoleon's northern army drove a handful of Prussians out of the town of Saarbrück. But thereafter Prussia acted ever on the offensive. The French, individually, fought like heroes, but they were no match for their stronger foes. In two armies France's incompetently commanded, ill-equipped forces were hurled back and prevented from uniting. One of these armies was led by Bazaine, former conqueror of Mexico; the other by MacMahon, afterwards president of France. Bazaine was successively beaten at Courmelles, Mars-la-Tour and Gravelotte (August 14, 16 and 18) and was penned up in the city of Metz. MacMahon moved forward to aid him, but on September 1, was surrounded at Sedan, and next day was forced to surrender with forty generals, 4,000 lesser officers and 84,000 men.

Napoleon III, who was with MacMahon's army, was also captured and packed off a prisoner to a German fortress. At news of his capture and the disgraceful failure of French arms rage and mortification seized all France. Napoleon was deposed; his wife and son were compelled to flee secretly to England; and, September 4, a republic was proclaimed.

On September 19, the Germans besieged Paris. On September 28 Bazaine surrendered at Metz. The latter city, snatched from Germany in the days of Charles V, once more was held by its original masters. Paris fell after a long and gallant siege; armies sent to relieve it were beaten. France was at Prussia's mercy. On March 1, 1871, the victorious Germans entered Paris; passing through the mighty Arc de Triomphe, which had been erected to commemorate the martial triumphs of France; thus adding a climax to perhaps the grimmest irony in the annals of warfare.

The provinces of Alsace and Lorraine and an indemnity of $1,000,000,000 were exacted by the conquerors—a fairly cheap fee for curing France of Napoleonism!

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair

By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

UNDER the heading, "Crippling His Wings," the New Republic of February 29 discusses efforts made to check the flying of the lone eagle, Col. Lindbergh, in this manner:

Ever since Lindbergh landed at Bourget Field, this country has given a perfect demonstration of the kind of parent who ruins his child's life with too much love. Lindbergh made the flight to Paris on his own responsibility. He got the backing himself, he even put his own money into it. His countrymen did nothing to help him.

But from the moment that he arrived at Paris, he became ours. Like a doting parent to whom his child's daring has been hitherto mere recklessness, but who, as soon as that daring has been crowned with success, wants to use it to redound to his—the parent's—prestige, this country pounced upon Lindbergh, as he came off the field of victory, put its arms possessively about him, smothered him with a mixture of pride, love and parental managing, and did everything in its power to destroy the very qualities that it adores in him.

For example, Lindbergh lands in France. He is young, he has never been to Europe. He loves flying. He has promised himself the fun of seeing Europe in his own way, i. e., by flying from one country to another. Do we let him do it? We do not.

We take charge of him and put him through a series of official dinners and receptions that gives him about as much chance to see Europe as though he were in a Pullman car with the curtains drawn. And all this in order to redound to our credit. He is no longer permitted to be himself. He is US personified. He is the United States. In effect, we say, "See! This is the kind of person we are!" And then, to cap the climax, we bring him home in a battleship! Lindbergh would have preferred to come back in an ocean liner. Any boy would, on his first trip to Europe. One's first trip on an ocean liner is a great adventure—the novelty of it, the many people of all kinds and conditions, floating for a week in a tiny, compact, variegated world of their own on the great Atlantic. And, instead of that, to be put on a gray battleship with a collection of people all of the same stripe, in a kind of ship that has about as much relation to life of the sea as a Ford factory has! We might as well have put him in a pneumatic tube and shot him across the Atlantic!

And then when we got him on this side, we continued to play the doting parent. He had to perform for the folks. We made him ride on the covered top of an automobile through miles and miles of yelling crowds—this boy who evidently hates publicity and indiscriminate hullabaloo. How much he hates it was revealed by a recent incident in Washington. As he walked up the path to the White House, some Babbitt in the crowd rushed out and slapped him on the back. And Lindbergh frowned. Yes, actually. He did not smile and hold out the glad hand in good American salesmanship or political style. He frowned. It was a peculiarly appropriate frown. That is what, in effect, the United States has been doing for months. It has been saying, "You see, I am not the cheap, pushing, vulgar salesman that you have been thinking I am. Look at Lindbergh!" It is really pathetic. Evidently we have been very sore on that point. And evidently we have enough sensibility left to wish to be something else. Just like the parent who finds his son admired for qualities which he does not have.

So we send him to Mexico and South American countries to prove to them that we are not what they think us.

Finally, in recompense for doing all these things which he did not want to do, someone in Washington has drawn the perfect inference. He is so precious to this nation that it must deprive him of the right to do the one thing that he wants to do—fly where and when and how he chooses! That certainly completes the circle. His life is so valuable that it must be preserved as an inspiration to the youth of the land! How long does the proponent of this absurd proposal think that Lindbergh would remain an inspiration to the youth of the nation if he yielded to such an unjustifiable infringement of his liberty? For youth, unlike parents of the old-fashioned type, really does love daring, courage, devotion to something greater than one's own life, is bored with all the trappings of material success, as compared with the joy and thrill of an everlasting flight.

The past few months must have been a rather steadily growing series of disillusionments for Lindbergh. Continued long enough, this sort of thing always means that the parent loses the love of his son. Every parent and every adult with any sensitiveness has suffered from that clear-eyed, cool appraisal of youth in regard to adult activities, and the gradual loss of their respect. It is not a pleasant experience. Rationalizations never help. For example, those who would restrict Lindbergh's flying activities in this country—"he must not go flying over those dangerous jungles"—are acting exactly like the parent who says to his child, "But why should you want to swim in the river when there is that nice, shallow creek near by to swim in? The river is dangerous, and it has rapids, and what would I do if you got drowned? Father and mother love you too much to let you do that."

PENNEY TO SPEND $2,000,000 IN 1928

ACCORDING to the Northwest Publisher and Printer, most northwest publishers will be interested in knowing that the 1928 advertising budget of the J. C. Penney Company will total about $2,000,000.

This is the amount that has been set aside for local advertising, practically all of which will be newspaper space.

According to R. L. Whitman, director of the advertising, the Penney company reports that they have found local advertising to be very fruitful during the past year. The Penney chain now numbers nearly 1,000 stores.

There will also be an institutional campaign. This will be handled by the J. Walter Thompson Co., advertising agents of New York City. No amount has been decided as yet for the institutional campaign nor has the medium been chosen. Last year farm papers were chiefly used.

RESORT BOOKLETS

RESORT booklets should be ready for distribution early in the spring and orders should be in the hands of printers now. The Dispatch has every facility for printing fine booklets.

The Ten Thousand Lakes Association is anxious that Minnesota resorts publish more and better advertising booklets. Lists of inquiries are provided by the association. Last year this list contained 10,000 names, all good prospects.

Richelieu

TYRANT and patriot, conspirator and foe to conspiracies, priest and man of blood, soldier and cardinal, great statesman and greater oppressor, generous patron of literature and personally a literary failure. These, in brief, are the chief characteristics of Armand Jean du Plessis, cardinal and Duke de Richelieu, the man who held all France in the hollow of his hand for a quarter century, and who did more than his share towards changing the destiny and history of the world.

Henry IV had quieted the quarrels between Catholics and Huguenots, had built up the nation that had been so severely battered by long civil war, and had paved the way for modern progress. But in the height of his career he had been murdered. His infant son, Louis XIII, succeeded him, and, during the lad's minority the queen mother, Marie de Medici, and the latter's Italian friends were in practical control. As a result, the great nobles waxed unduly powerful, arrogant and rebellious of royal command; abuses of many sorts crept into the state; the glorious realm built up by Henry IV threatened to weaken and fall prey to foreign influences.

When Louis XIII grew to manhood there seemed scant chance for betterment. He was weak, dissolute, lazy, stupid, with little thought or care for his country's best interests. It was at this critical moment that Richelieu appeared on the scene.

Richelieu had been educated for the army, but on his elder brother's death, in 1606, had become bishop of Lucon, at the age of twenty-one. But the church, except as its offices furthered his ambitions, held no attractions for the boy bishop. Far away, in Paris, glittered the gay court, and that court became his goal. Thither he went as clerical deputy for the states general, in 1614, and there he stayed. He won the interest of the queen mother, and by her influence was made secretary of state for war and foreign affairs. Barely had he begun his political climb when, owing to court politics, he was disgraced and banished from Paris. But in 1620 he returned, and two years later became cardinal. From thence on he was the foremost power in the state.

He set to work at once tearing to pieces France's flimsy political fabric and remodeling it on a new basis. By execution, banishment and imprisonment he cut down the privileges and growing strength of the great nobles. He demolished their mighty fortresses and curtailed their feudal rights. The power thus snatched from them was added to the crown. Next he assailed the Huguenots, besieging the city of Rochelle, their stronghold and rallying place. England sent provisions to the besieged, but Richelieu cut off the supply, forcing a surrender.

By thus adding to the might of the crown and cutting away all forces that threatened to rival or weaken it, Richelieu was really strengthening himself. For he, and not the puppet, Louis XIII, was actual ruler of France. Having disposed of foes at home, Richelieu next moved to check the power of the Hapsburgs in Austria and Spain, aiding the German and Swedish Protestants in the Thirty Years' war, with a cheerful disregard to the fact that he had just tried to wreck Protestantism in France. It was also by his contrivance that Portugal, in 1640, separated from Spain.

Meantime, Louis XIII feared and hated Richelieu and would gladly have rid the earth of him had he been able to govern France without the cardinal's aid. But he could not get on without Richelieu, and it was pleasant, while leading an idle, dissipated life, to know another was making his kingdom the greatest in all Europe.

The nobles whose privileges the cardinal had curtailed, the soldiery and gallants whose duels he had forbidden on pain of death, the court and the king, all detested Richelieu. The queen mother, who had launched him in his career, turned against him. He wrecked her political power at one blow. The nobles again and again conspired to overthrow or assassinate him. He cut off the conspirators' heads. The clergy and parliament murmured at his tyranny. He put additional checks on them. Two noblemen, Cinq Mars and De Thou, plotted his downfall, and there can be little doubt King Louis was privy to their plot. Richelieu had the two executed, and the king dared not defend them.

With iron hand, relentlessly, arrogantly, yet ever wisely, this strange man swayed the destinies of France, making her powerful at home and terrible abroad, crushing out feudalism, building up a centralized royal power, conducting an incredibly brilliant foreign policy. He was an ardent patron of arts and culture and was author of some of the most poorly written poems and dramas of his day. Yet of these wretched literary efforts he is said to have been prouder than of his wondrous statecraft.

In December, 1642, he died, having placed France on a pinnacle of greatness that was the envy of the world. His puppet and dupe, Louis XIII, deprived of the man who had so long been his master and who had made his reign famous, died a few months later, leaving a son—Louis XIV—whose future greatness was largely due to the achievements of that relentless genius, Cardinal Richelieu, the man who was greater than the king.

Von Moltke

"SIRE," said Napoleon III's minister of war, "all is in absolute readiness for the Prussian campaign. down to the last bullet on the last gaiter of the last soldier."

Now, this was one of the most monumental lies ever uttered.

Napoleon III was well aware that Europe distrusted him. He knew the French were naturally restless, that they had had a long era of military glory, and that a few years of humdrum peace might lead them to weary of him. So he went on the principle that a war every four years would keep them content, swell France's martial renown and make safe his own crown.

In the first decade of the Nineteenth century Napoleon the Great had crushed Prussia to the dust and humiliated her king. The son of that king was on the Prussian throne in 1870 and the great Napoleon's nephew ruled France.

Bismarck, Von Moltke and other Prussian statesmen had foreseen trouble with France and were well prepared for it, even if they did not (as many think) secretly bring about the conflict. France, on the other hand, was totally unready for any such clash. Prussia's revenge for the sixty-year-old injuries was at hand. The overt occasion of the Franco-Prussian war was as follows:

Queen Isabella of Spain was deposed. The Spanish crown was offered to Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern, a relative to King William of Prussia. Napoleon III at once declared that such selection would destroy the "balance of power" and leave France exposed to Prussian attack on east and south. He therefore demanded that Leopold's candidature be withdrawn. King William meekly obeyed. Utterly deceived by such submission, Napoleon went a step further and demanded a pledge from William that no Prussian prince should ever sit on the Spanish throne. William promptly refused to grant so absurd a request and publicly snubbed the ambassador who transmitted it. This was such an excuse as Napoleon had longed for. France at once declared war on Prussia (July 19, 1870) and rushed a body of troops to the German frontier.

So far, so good. But, owing to graft and incompetency, France's army was in wretched condition. Yet France went mad with patriotic zeal. The feats of the first Napoleon against Prussia were recalled. Everyone expected a triumphal march to the Prussian capital. The cry "On to Berlin!" was on all lips.

In contrast to this, Prussia's troops were in splendid preparation. The north and south German states (on many of which Napoleon III had been told he might rely for neutrality or even aid) unanimously joined Prussia, shaking interecine grievances in a common cause; 477,000 men were mustered, as against France's 310,000. The German forces were divided into three armies, which at a signal crept unheeded across the Rhine like a huge three-headed snake, preceded by a cloud of Uhlan, sweeping all before them and striking at France's very heart. King William was commander in chief, with Marshal von Moltke, the peerless tactician, as his chief of staff. The French armies, commanded by Napoleon III in person, made Metz their headquarters.

On August 2, part of Napoleon's northern army drove a handful of Prussians out of the town of Saarbrück. But thereafter Prussia acted ever on the offensive. The French, individually, fought like heroes, but they were no match for their stronger foes. In two armies France's incompetently commanded, ill-equipped forces were hurled back and prevented from uniting. One of these armies was led by Bazaine, former conqueror of Mexico; the other by MacMahon, afterwards president of France. Bazaine was successively beaten at Concrelles, Mars-la-Tour and Gravelotte (August 14, 16 and 18) and was penned up in the city of Metz. MacMahon moved forward to aid him, but on September 1, was surrounded at Sedan, and next day was forced to surrender with forty generals, 4,000 lesser officers and 84,000 men.

Napoleon III, who was with MacMahon's army, was also captured and packed off a prisoner to a German fortress. At news of his capture and the disgraceful failure of French arms rage and mortification seized all France. Napoleon was deposed; his wife and son were compelled to flee secretly to England; and, September 4, a republic was proclaimed.

On September 19, the Germans besieged Paris. On September 28 Bazaine surrendered at Metz. The latter city, snatched from Germany in the days of Charles V, once more was held by its original masters. Paris fell after a long and gallant siege; armies sent to relieve it were beaten. France was at Prussia's mercy. On March 1, 1871, the victorious Germans entered Paris; passing through the mighty Arc de Triomphe, which had been erected to commemorate the martial triumphs of France; thus adding a climax to perhaps the grimmest irony in the annals of warfare.

The provinces of Alsace and Lorraine and an indemnity of $1,000,000,000 were exacted by the conquerors—a fairly cheap fee for curing France of Napoleonism!

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair

By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

Does He Appreciate Health?

Handwritten signature: J. M. Smith

The faculties of constructiveness, culture, common sense, identity, conscientiousness, enter into this subject. When these traits are pronounced in a writer, it is a sure thing that he appreciates and values his body as working material for progress.

The writing of one who is healthy, and is concerned with remaining healthy, shows a firmness and clearness of script. It is not muddy and confusing in appearance. It is decidedly pleasing to the eye and there is a suggestion of flowing brooks in the lines. T bars are wavy and its reach higher than the average. T's that reach too high indicate a mental type who sacrifices all for the mental side and ignores the body—sometimes forgetting to eat. T's that do not reach high indicate a person who eats often and with no regard to the chemistry of the food. Y's that are made without loop, but with much pressure on down stroke, indicate a person inconsiderate of health because it is inherently strong.

Large writers eat carelessly as do small writers. In this case, as in most others, the medium, conservative writer is the controlled and poised type.

FACE WITHERING HEAT OF THE MOJAVE DESERT

WALK TO VICTORYVILLE, CALIF., ON 4TH LAP OF LONG RACE

LIMPING CROWD HALF CRAWLS, HALF STUMBLES OVER ROUTE

By JIM POWERS

Victoryville, Calif., March 7.—From mountain barriers into the withering heat of the Mojave desert, Charley Pyle's "bunion derbyists" walked forth here today on the fourth lap of the Los Angeles to New York foot race.

A 37-mile trek through the arid desert regions to Barstow faced the limping aggregation which yesterday half-crawled and half-stumbled up steep Cajon Pass through the Sierra Nevada range.

The colorful Hopi Indian, Nicholas Quomawahu, finished second in yesterday's race here from Bloomington, a distance of 44 miles. The second place, however, gave him actual leadership of the marathon, rankings in which are computed on an elapsed time basis.

Quomawahu covered the uphill run to Victoryville in six hours and 55 minutes. His time was bettered by Nestor Erickson, a Finn, who clicked off the 44 miles in six hours, 47 minutes and 20 seconds to give him second position in marathon standing with a total elapsed time of 13:39:20 for the 96.7 miles from Los Angeles which is lower than all but one time, Quomawahu's, which is 13:35:15.

Olli Wattinen, Finland, is ten minutes behind his countryman for third honors with an elapsed time of 13:49:02.

The hospital squad which follows the runners grew rapidly yesterday as the struggling competitors dropped out of the crowd, unable to negotiate the climb over Cajon Pass.

But the thought of the $48,000 prize money to be divided among those fortunate who exist long enough to reach New York, brought back the cripples who with many a grimace took up the weary plodding to the day's goal.

Allentown, Pa.—Pat Haley, Philadelphia middleweight, and Jackie Horner, St. Louis, fought a 10-round draw, declared by the referee after the judges disagreed.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY
UNITED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

Jimmy McLarnin, who arrived at the forefront of fistie fame by virtue of a spectacular knockout victory over Sid Terris, now is being touted by his admirers as a second Joe Gans or another Benny Leonard.

Adulation to that extent is a bit premature. The little Irishman is clever, and he certainly nailed Terris with a beautiful right hand to the jaw, but Jimmy is not the boxer that Leonard was, nor can he be rated with Gans on the strength of one punch.

McLarnin LOOKS like the best lightweight to come along since Benny Leonard did his mother a couple of years ago. But he must prove that appearances are not deceptive by beating Sammy Mandell.

Beating Mandell may take a bit of doing, as they say overseas. Because he has been so evasive, the present lightweight champion has come to be under-rated. Fight fans in the East forget that the little Albanian from Rockford is quite a devastating two-fisted puncher himself.

It would be a shock to McLarnin's admirers if he were to be beaten in a battle for the lightweight title, but it would not be a surprise to fans who are not swayed too easily by sentiment in favor of a sensational newcomer.

Mandell is, or was when he fought in the East last, a busy, two-handed hitter who keeps everlastingly on top of his man, but still is clever enough to avoid knockout wallops like the one Terris encountered. Bud Taylor, although pounds lighter, was much the same sort of fighter, and Taylor whipped Jimmy McLarnin three times in succession.

But because McLarnin is simple, unaffected, rather wholesomely boyish, his tremendous popularity leads those who like him to overrate his fighting ability. It is quite likely that he has what it takes to become lightweight champion. But it will take more than one minute and 47 seconds of action to prove it.

An instance of Jimmy's naivete was furnished following the Terris fight. McLarnin, after a couple of handsprings, was escorted across the ring to the microphone to speak a piece.

Jimmy blushed, swallowed hard once or twice, and then stammered into the unfeeling little disc:

"That Terris—er—er—certainly is elusive."

The man he referred to after the fashion of New York sports writers was stretched out, semi-conscious, in his corner, eyes glazed and limbs useless, while seconds sought to bring him to with smelling salts.

McLarnin's right hand to the jaw had knocked all the elusiveness out of Terris for one night.

One thing is certain. The little Irishman has done more to restore interest in the lightweight class than any fighter since Leonard retired. And if McLarnin beats Mandell, Jimmy will be the most popular champion in ANY division.

Jack O'Sullivan, who refereed what there was of the McLarnin-Terris shindig, is enthusiastic about Jimmy's hitting, because the blow which laid Sidney low traveled only about 18 inches. It is the short punchers who are the dangerous ones. Sam Langford, perhaps the greatest of all heavyweights, used to hit that way.

BUS CHARTERED TO CONVEY PASSENGERS; LYCEUM TO RECEIVE RETURNS

GLENWOOD'S OPPOSITION TO LOCALS IN INITIAL CLASH AT REGIONAL IS STRONG

On to Alexandria. The big cry goes up as loyal fans of the B. H. S. here are contemplating ways and means to get to the tournament town Friday night, and watch their home products in the opening battle for regional honors against Glenwood.

While many plan to leave by car others are trying to find other ways to make the trip. G. P. Stein has chartered a bus for the evening and all those desiring to make the trip should avail themselves of tickets immediately. They can be secured by applying to Mr. Stein at the Ransford hotel. Special prices for transportation will prevail. The bus will leave from the Ransford hotel at 4 p. m. and will return after the game.

The Brainerd high school team was in strict training today to prepare for the regional. In Glenwood they will find strong competition and they will have to be at their best to defeat them in order to enter the finals and play off with the winner of the Appleton-St. Cloud tilt.

Friday evening's game will undoubtedly be a fast one.

Fans who remain at home will be able to get the returns at the Lyceum theatre where a service has been arranged through the Western Union for details concerning the game.

New York—Phil McGraw, Detroit was held to a 10-round draw by Bobby Burns, Brownsville, Lou Kersch, New York, beat Tommy Gerard, Shenandoah, Pa., in the semi-final.

HEENEY IS CHALLENGER NUMBER 2 FOR CHANCE FOR TUNNEY'S CROWN

New York, March 7.—(U.P.)—Tom Heeney, the New Zealand heavyweight who never did so well in his own country or in England, today was challenger No. 2 for a chance at Gene Tunney's crown.

The New York state athletic commission yesterday accepted Heeney's challenge for a match with Tunney, but relegated it to second place because of a previous challenge by Jack Sharkey.

Cat-Tails Not Popular

Cat-tails have a disagreeable odor that is not easily removed and for that reason they are not satisfactory when used for upholstering and making mattresses. Cat-tails are not used commercially in this country. In England they were used for upholstering, prior to the time that kapok was introduced from Java.

Birds and Colors

A peacock is unable to distinguish one color from another. Birds that fly by day see everything a bright reddish orange; night birds see blue and violet.

WAGES CAMPAIGN TO GET TO REFORMATORY

Oregon, Ill., March 7.—(U.P.)—Kenneth Nichols, 12 years old and determined, started a campaign designed to win for him a term in the St. Charles reformatory.

First he tried to steal an automobile, but he was too small to reach the starter.

Then he attacked another boy with a broomstick.

"My brother's in St. Charles and I want to be with him," he told authorities.

The sheriff's office declined to commit him to the reformatory.

Originated in "Spindle"

The origin of the word "spinstler" probably is derived from the "spindle side" of a house, where the unmarried women of a family did their spinning, according to an answered question in Liberty.

STILL GROOMING HIS ROCKET FOR LONG VOYAGE

ROBERT CONDIT, OHIO INVENTOR, CONFIDENT OF LANDING ON VENUS

TO GET HOME HE WILL BUILD ANOTHER ROCKET, TAKE NATIVES BACK

Miami Beach, Fla., March 7.—After landing on the planet Venus by means of a huge projectile-like rocket he has invented, Robert Condit, Ohio inventor, plans to invent another rocket "and bring back some of the natives," he said today.

Condit is grooming his rocket for a flight of several million miles, which he estimates will require not more than 48 hours. He will leave when atmospheric conditions are "absolutely perfect," he said, "probably within a week."

The explosive which will propel his contraption out of contact with the earth's gravity, he said, will be composed mainly of zinc, sodium, ethyl iodide and peroxide. Once out of the earth's pull, he said, he plans to steer the craft into a "meteoric stream."

Such streams, he said, travel in eccentric orbits and at greater speed than planets. He is planning to use the stream as ultimate motive power to pull him to Venus, on approaching which he intends to leap out in a parachute.

He will wear knickers on the flight, he said, and will catch his breath from a supply of oxygen to be carried in a huge tank placed inside his air-tight rocket.

Cotton batting burned down to carbon was used as filament in early electric lamps. Bamboo, paper and silk served the same purpose.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting

By EDNA PURDY WALSH

Editor, Character Reading Magazine.

Does He Appreciate Health?

He is

The faculties of constructiveness, culture, common sense, identity, conscientiousness, enter into this subject. When these traits are pronounced in a writer, it is a sure thing that he appreciates and values his body as working material for progress.

The writing of one who is healthy, and is concerned with remaining healthy, shows a firmness and clearness of script. It is not muddy and confusing in appearance. It is decidedly pleasing to the eye and there is a suggestion of flowing brooks in the lines. T bars are wavy and t's reach higher than the average. T's that reach too high indicate a mental type who sacrifices all for the mental side and ignores the body—sometimes forgetting to eat. T's that do not reach high indicate a person who eats often and with no regard to the chemistry of the food. Y's that are made without loop, but with much pressure on down stroke, indicate a person inconsiderate of health because it is inherently strong.

Large writers eat carelessly as do small writers. In this case, as in most others, the medium, conservative writer is the controlled and poised type.

FACE WITHERING HEAT OF THE MOJAVE DESERT

WALK TO VICTORYVILLE, CALIF., ON 4TH LAP OF LONG RACE

LIMPING CROWD HALF CRAWLS. HALF STUMBLES OVER ROUTE

By JIM POWERS (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Victoryville, Calif., March 7.—From mountain barriers into the withering heat of the Mojave desert, Charley Pyle's "bunion derbyists" walked forth here today on the fourth lap of the Los Angeles to New York foot race.

A 37-mile trek through the arid desert regions to Barstow faced the limping aggregation which yesterday half-crawled and half-stumbled up steep Cajon Pass through the Sierra Nevada range.

The colorful Hopi Indian, Nicholas Quomawahu, finished second in yesterday's race here from Bloomington, a distance of 44 miles. The second place, however, gave him actual leadership of the marathon, rankings in which are computed on an elapsed time basis.

Quomawahu covered the uphill run to Victoryville in six hours and 55 minutes. His time was bettered by Nestor Erickson, a Finn, who clicked off the 44 miles in six hours, 47 minutes and 20 seconds to give him second position in marathon standing with a total elapsed time of 13:39:20 for the 96.7 miles from Los Angeles which is lower than all but one time, Quomawahu's, which is 13:35:15.

Olli Watinen, Finland, is ten minutes behind his countryman for third honors with an elapsed time of 13:49:02.

The hospital squad which follows the runners grew rapidly yesterday as the straggling competitors dropped out of the crowd, unable to negotiate the climb over Cajon Pass.

But the thought of the $48,000 prize money to be divided among those fortunate who exist long enough to reach New York, brought back the cripples who with many a grimace took up the weary plodding to the day's goal.

D. A. R. RAISE $250 FOR CHAPEL FUND

Ten Thousand Dollars Required to Complete and Furnish Building at Snelling

$60,000 SPENT SO FAR
Chaplain Frank C. Rideout Addresses Gathering at First Baptist Church

A very interesting meeting was held last evening at the Baptist church in the interests of the new chapel at Fort Snelling. Captain Frank C. Rideout, chaplain, and his helpers were on hand with stereopticon and a DeVry picture machine to illustrate and explain the lack of suitable conditions for the care of the religious life of soldiers at army garrisons and also the progress that has been made in the past four years at Fort Snelling. Captain Rideout appeared under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who, under the leadership of their regent, Mrs. M. A. Bronson, had succeeded in quietly raising approximately $250 in and about Brainerd for the building fund of this house of worship. It is a very creditable achievement.

Chaplain Rideout made very clear the fact that the young men enlisting nowadays in the U. S. army are of the more refined and cultivated class as in contrast to the rougher elements that used to seek service under the colors in the days of legalized liquor. He told how the boys look upon military service as an opportunity for education by travel and how they respond to the appeal of the religious life and how those who become soldiers professionally become men of families and the family in the garrison has a refining influence.

To date $60,000 has been expended on a $100,000 building, and $10,000 to $12,000 more will complete and furnish it. The reason why so fine a structure has been erected at so low an expenditure is because of the labor contributed by the soldiers themselves thus further evincing their interest in religion. A fair audience heard the lecture and saw the pictures. The whole city would be interested and profited had they heard this presentation.

This amount of $250 was raised without any particular pressure from the outside. The "Daughters" in their loyalty to all things good just took it upon themselves and put it over.

CANADIAN WORLD WAR VET- ERAN CONFESSED DROWN- ING TWO SMALL SONS

Crown Point, Ind., March 7. — (UP)—The state of Indiana moved rapidly today toward an early trial for George Chisholm, 35, Canadian world war veteran, who confessed to drowning his two small sons.

Prosecuting Attorney Oliver Starr announced the Lake county criminal grand jury would be convened in special session Monday to consider indictments against Chisholm, who was bound over to it two days ago
on two charges of first degree murder.

Chisholm, in written confessions, admitted he bound wire around his two sons, George, 9, and Edgar, 6, weighted their bodies with steel rails and pushed them into the Lake Michigan-Calumet river ship canal at Indiana Harbor on the night of

'QUEEN OF DIAMONDS' VISITS HAVANA, CUBA

ARRIVED YESTERDAY IN CHAS.
LEVINE'S AIRPLANE,
COLUMBIA

By THOMAS ALLEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Havana, March 7. — The popular imagination of this Latin-American country was gripped today by the presence of Miss Mabel Boll, the first woman long-distance flyer to visit here.

Miss Boll, known as the "Queen of Diamonds" because of her collection of precious stones, arrived here yesterday in Charles A. Levine's airplane, Columbia, after a flight of almost 14 hours from the United States.

She was the first out of the plane,
the first to be greeted by a small group at the flying field and the center of interest.

Cuba had become somewhat calm toward long distance flights. It was only a few weeks ago that Col. Chas.
A. Lindbergh flew here after his South American and Central American tour. Only a few days ago the dirigible Los Angeles passed over on its return trip from the Panama Canal Zone.

But Cuba had not yet had opportunity to greet a woman air adventurer.

The Columbia, piloted by Wilmer Stultz and carrying Miss Boll and Levine, dropped out of a cloudless,

tropical sky shortly after noon yesterday. It was two hours in advance of the time Havana expected it.

Miss Boll stepped out. She was radiant. Her diamonds flashed. Her brown ensemble suit, topped with a flying helmet, added a piquancy which attracted the few newspapermen and flying officials at Columbia field. She was smiling, happily, because the flight was a realization of a nine months' dream. She had asked Levine to permit her to become a passenger on the Columbia on a London-New York proposed flight. When this was impossible
she came to America to join Levine
on his next flight.

Their stay in Havana will be of short duration. Levine said he had to be in New York Sunday and that they would take-off Thursday on the return trip. They plan to make several stops in Florida before proceeding northwards.

COLONEL LINDBERGH "MAN OF MYSTERY"

INVENTOR OF "FUELLESS" AIR-PLANE MOTOR, HAS APPOINT-MENT WITH HIM

Washington, March 7. — (UP) — Col. Charles A. Lindbergh continued
today to be a "man of mystery."

The airman, who returned to Washington suddenly yesterday after making a flight to Belleville, Ill.,
the day before, immediately had his motor tuned up and his gas tanks filled at Bolling Field, but the plane supposedly was still there this morning.

At the Racquet club, where Lindbergh slept a good part of yesterday, the inference was given that the flier was still a guest, though it could not be verified early today.

J. Barr Peat, business associate of Lester J. Hendershot of Pittsburgh, Pa., inventor of the "fuelless" airplane motor, called at the Racquet club yesterday to keep an "appointment" with Lindbergh. Major Thos.
G. Lanphier, of Selfridge Field,
Mich., personal friend of Lindbergh, and interested in the invention, also
was reported to be at the club.

Hendershot and Peat have been here since Sunday, staying at one hotel and having their mail adressed to another in an attempt to keep their whereabouts secret.

Rumors that the flying colonel intended to enter Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, for a rest, were denied at the institution.

Covering of Fleas

The kindergarten school was having an open discussion about dogs. Jo was very eager to tell the class about his dog and after others in the room had told what they knew about dogs
the teacher said, "Jo may tell us about the outside covering of the body of his dog." "My dog has a covering of fleas," said Jo boastfully.

Unkind Remark

It is a notorious fact that when a lawyer makes his own will he generally bails it up. This is because he has acquired such a habit of getting all there is out of others that he forgets he is working for himself.—

Overwork Throws a Heavy Burden on the Kidneys.

OVERWORK, rich foods and stimulating drinks put extra burdens on our kidneys. When the kidneys slow up, impurities remain in the blood and are apt to make one languid,
tired and achy, with dull headaches,
dizziness and often nagging backache.
A common warning is scanty or burn-

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's, a stimu-

the kidneys and aid in the elimination of waste impurities. Are endorsed by ary—shortest month in the year—hangs up a new high record for Hupmobile sales.

February marked a new high point in a sales curve that started sharply upward last October. November shattered all previous records. October, November and December proved the greatest last quarter in Hupmobile's 20 years of manufacturing. January 1928 exceeded January 1927 by 32% in total volume of business.

And now March, with an overflow of orders, gives all indications of surpassing the achievements of even the past three months.

Facts have a way of speaking for them-

not only the tremendous public demand for the new Hupmobile Century Eight

THE MOTOR OIL OF TODAY—ISO = VIS!

In the old days, if you wanted easy starting you bought a light oil. Under working conditions it became too thin to lubricate the engine.

If you wanted correct lubrication under working conditions, you bought a heavy oil—too heavy to permit easy starting.

If you wanted both easy start- ing and correct lubrication under working conditions, you had to compromise — to buy a medium oil that met neither requirement satisfactorily.

The engineering staff of Stand- ard Oil Company (Indiana), recognizing these facts, under- took the work of finding an oil which would meet these require- ments and give the character of ideals of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

They found that by combining a carefully refined diluent with a product oil, they secured practically constant viscosity. This is ISO = VIS!

ISO = VIS makes no compromise. It maintains the proper body for correct lubrication from start to finish. It has a proper body for starting and it gives correct lubri- cation under working conditions.

At last you can buy satisfactory lubrication! The motoring public —lubrication engineers—proclaim there is a grade of ISO = VIS to meet the needs of your car at this season of the year. Try it!

W. C. Cobb Re-elected Superintendent of Brainerd Schools
for 1928-1929

W. C. Cobb who has been superintendent of the Brainerd schools for several years was re-elected superintendent for the school term of August 1, 1928 to July 31, 1929 at this week's meet of the Board of Education.

Bylaws of the organization specify that the election of superintendent of school must be held in March.

Authorization was given the special committee named to investigate the advisability of purchasing additional portable pianos for the Harrison, Lincoln and Whittier schools, to purchase two Cable Nelson portable pianos and three of the Wurliitzer make. The Harrison and Lincoln schools will each receive two and the Whittier school one. The old pianos now at the Harrison and Lincoln schools will be turned in for credit. A motion was passed that the $100 donated by the Lowell school for two pianos be refunded to them. The Lowell school received their two last month.

The president was directed to appoint any member of the board who could conveniently attend to represent the Brainerd school district at the annual meeting of the Minnesota School Board Association in Minneapolis at the Nicollet hotel, March 22, 23, and 24.

The treasurer's report for the quarter ending January 21 as okayed by the finance committee was accepted and placed on file.

Superintendent Cobb's report for the past month follows:

The following tabulation gives the distribution of pupils in the several school buildings for the school month ending March 2, 1928:

Original Entry	Average Belonging	Average Attendance	New Entries for the Month
High School and Mixed
Grade	564	532.875	516.975
Lowell School	475	451.625	439.2
Harrison School	373	353.87	344.34
Lincoln School	393	361	350
Whittier School	248	233.625	226.075
Riverside School	70	65.1	62.3
Garfield School	54	53.475	48.675
Advanced Eighth and
Primary Dept.	72	57.15	55.625
Normal Training Dept.	11	11	11
	2260	2119.72	2054.19

The 80 new entries during the month just closed consist largely of the pupils in the two primary rooms opened, 41 being enrolled at the Washington school and 33 at the Lowell school. There will be another primary room to be opened at the Whittier school a little later which we estimate will enroll from 25 to 30 primary children, so that it is a safe estimate that out total enrollment for the school year, September to June, will exceed 2,300 pupils.

The high school principal estimates that the probable number of graduates from the high school this year will be about the same as last year, perhaps from 105 to 110 graduates in addition to the normal training class of 11, but the exact number cannot be determined until somewhat later.

During the month just closed, the district declamatory contest in three departments of public speaking, was held in our local high school assembly room before a good sized audience and our local school won two, out of a possible three, first places in the contest, one being in the oratory selection and the other in the dramatic. The results in the recent athletic district contest are too well known by all to require special comment. We are glad to state, however, concerning the athletic team, that in both conduct and scholarship we have had no occasion for worry or annoyance from either source during the entire season.

In order to relieve a somewhat crowded condition at the Lincoln school, we have recently transferred the most advanced class at the Lincoln to the Washington building, where they will be in charge of Miss Prattvet and Mrs. Fleming for the remainder of the year. In order to make room for the above transfer at the Washington, 25 pupils who had completed all of their back grade work in these rooms were transferred to the high school assembly room.

RUGS FREE

The biggest offer ever made. We will take your old rugs, old clothing, or any kind of old materials, and we will make a new rug for you of any size and color you want just like the sample our agent will show you. The rug will be good for twenty-five years, and will always be in style. You pay only for the labor cost when you receive the rug. Write us to our main office, and we will have our agent call on you when he is in your locality, which will be about March 20th.

ferred to the high school assembly room.

It is very earnestly hoped by high school students, high school teachers, and I think by a very large number of people in our city, that before another basketball season comes around more adequate facilities of some kind may be provided in order to give our high school teams a more equal chance with their opponents in this branch of athletic sport. It is the unanimous wish, also, of all the schools included in the 11th athletic district, that Brainerd may soon be provided with a gymnasium that will permit the annual tournament to be held in this central location rather than in a smaller town less accessible and entailing each year increased cost on account of the distance.

In our commercial department we have seven Remington machines which have been in use a number of years, and which would normally be turned in for exchange at the end of the present school year. A special exchange rate, which was to expire on February 29, would reduce our exchange allowance on these machines by an amount which would be unwise, in my opinion, to sacrifice. In order to extend the time until after our Board meeting, I notified their representative by letter on the 29th that we would conditionally accept their exchange offer, subject to the approval of the Board of Education at their March meeting. If the Board sees fit to approve of the exchange, we will be permitted to use our old machines for the balance of the year, receive new machines for the opening of school in September, and pay for the same after delivery in September.

Meet in Brainerd

The Crow Wing County Historical society, newly organized group, may be signally honored this year by the State Historical society who have expressed the willingness to hold their 1928 summer convention in Brainerd and the Ten Thousand Lakes district.

All members of the organization are urged to be present at the meeting tomorrow evening.

W. C. Cobb Re-elected Superintendent of Brainerd Schools
for 1928-1929

W. C. Cobb who has been superintendent of the Brainerd schools for several years was re-elected superintendent for the school term of August 1, 1928 to July 31, 1929 at this week's meet of the Board of Education.

Bylaws of the organization specify that the election of superintendent of school must be held in March.

Authorization was given the special committee named to investigate the advisability of purchasing additional portable pianos for the Harrison, Lincoln and Whittier schools, to purchase two Cable Nelson portable pianos and three of the Wurlitzer make. The Harrison and Lincoln schools will each receive two and the Whittier school one. The old pianos now at the Harrison and Lincoln schools will be turned in for credit. A motion was passed that the $100 donated by the Lowell school for two pianos be refunded to them. The Lowell school received their two last month.

The president was directed to appoint any member of the board who could conveniently attend to represent the Brainerd school district at the annual meeting of the Minnesota School Board Association
in Minneapolis at the Nicollet hotel,
March 22, 23, and 24.

The treasurer's report for the quarter ending January 21 as okayed
by the finance committee was accepted and placed on file.

Superintendent Cobb's report for
the past month follows:

The following tabulation gives the distribution of pupils in the several school buildings for the school
month ending March 2, 1928:

	Original Entry	Average Belonging	Average Attendance	New Entries for the Month
High School and Mixed
Grade	564	532.875	516.975	1
Lowell School	475	451.625	439.2	33
Harrison School	373	358.87	344.34	1
Lincoln School	333	361	350	1
Whittier School	248	233.625	226.075	1
Riverside School	70	65.1	62.3	1
Garfield School	54	53.475	48.675	2
Advanced Eighth and
Primary Dept.	72	57.15	55.625	40
Normal Training Dept.	11	11	11	0
	2260	2119.72	2054.19	80

The 80 new entries during the month just closed consist largely of the pupils in the two primary rooms opened, 41 being enrolled at the Washington school and 33 at the Lowell school. There will be another primary room to be opened at the Whittier school a little later which we estimate will enroll from 25 to 30 primary children, so that it is a safe estimate that out total enrollment for the school year, September to June, will exceed 2,300 pupils.

The high school principal estimates that the probable number of graduates from the high school this year will be about the same as last year, perhaps from 105 to 110 graduates in addition to the normal training class of 11, but the exact number cannot be determined until somewhat later.

During the month just closed, the district declamatory contest in three departments of public speaking, was held in our local high school assembly room before a good sized audience and our local school won two,
out of a possible three, first places in the contest, one being in the oratory selection and the other in the dramatic. The results in the recent athletic district contest are too well known by all to require special comment. We are glad to state, however, concerning the athletic team,
that in both conduct and scholarship
we have had no occasion for worry or annoyance from either source
during the entire season.

In order to relieve a somewhat crowded condition at the Lincoln school, we have recently transferred the most advanced class at the Lincoln to the Washington building,
where they will be in charge of Miss Prattvet and Mrs. Fleming for the remainder of the year. In order to make room for the above transfer at the Washington, 25 pupils who had completed all of their back grade
work in these rooms were trans-

It is very earnestly hoped by high school students, high school teachers, and I think by a very large number of people in our city, that before another basketball season comes around more adequate facilities of some kind may be provided in order to give our high school teams a more equal chance with their opponents in this branch of athletic sport. It is the unanimous wish, also, of all the schools included in the 11th athletic district, that Brainerd may soon be provided with a gymnasium that will permit the annual tournament to be held in this central location rather than in a smaller town less accessible and en-

In our commercial department we have seven Remington machines which have been in use a number of cial exchange rate, which was to our exchange allowance on these machines by an amount which would be unwise, in my opinion, to sacrifice. In order to extend the time until after our Board meeting, I notified their representative by let-ditionally accept their exchange

SYNOPSIS

As a white boss of Frisco, Buckwell seeks to secure valuable ancestral Vasquez property. His lawyer's nephew, Terry, loves Dolores Vasquez and exposes Buckwell's perfidy. Buckwell attempts to wreck their love affair. Vasquez dies of stroke when Buckwell rudely confronts him. Dolores and Terry expose Buckwell as Chinaman in effort to avenge Vasquez's death. Buckwell kidnaps them and threatens Terry with torture unless Dolores denies Chinese accusations. She appears before large body of men and lies about Buckwell to save Terry. Buckwell triumphant.

Before Lu Fong could reply the white bosses returned Buckwell's smile with relief and nods of approval. As they crowded around to extend congratulations on his vindication Buckwell swaggered forward and offered his hand.

The long men stared into space or whispered to each other. They were unable to believe their ears. Lu Fong approached Dolores with a deadly, threatening look in his eyes. But she had even forgotten that he was in the room. As soon as Buckwell left the light button to reveal in the plaudits of his associates Dolores swiftly protected the fatal switch with her own hand and electrified every man in the room by crying out:

"Hold Senor Buckwell! He is a Chinaman!"

Buckwell whirled with both arms outstretched and, pushing aside the

"Hold Senor Buckwell! He is a Chinaman!"

men who surrounded him, made for Dolores.

"Don't let him touch me!" she warned in terror, her hand covering the switch protectively.

Buckwell was seized by strong hands on all sides. His struggles were futile, yet he retained a fine air of injured dignity. "The girl is demented. Let me have her taken to her room," he said.

But for once no one believed Chris Buckwell. He found that his political contemporaries were holding him prisoner in his own home.

"That is not true. I am perfectly sane!" defended Dolores, her eyes shining and her cheeks red with excitement. "He made me lie to you. He said that if I told the truth again he would press this light switch!" she pointed to it as if it were a poisonous scorpion—"which would be the signal for Terrence O'Shaughnessy's death." Her eyes sought Brandon, and she continued, "Terry is bound and gagged down stairs in a torture chamber."

Every white and yellow man in the room knew that Dolores had told the truth. Buckwell glared at her with murder in his eyes, but was prevented from reaching her, or the switch, by the restraining hands of the men who had him safely plied in a big chair.

Every Chinaman smiled broadly in unrestrained satisfaction, disclosing shiny white teeth. Lu Fong's very expression asked Dolores' pardon for having doubted her. But of all those present Brandon was the most violently affected.

"You—dam scoundrel, where is that boy of mine?" he demanded.

It is a strange trait of human nature to protect one's kin in dire extremity, no matter how indifferent one may have been to them when things were running along smoothly. Brandon was not an exception to the rule.

Buckwell calmly returned Brandon's glare. "Find him!" he hissed. It was a challenge.

A dead silence followed the announcement.

"He is in a secret room," Dolores hastened to explain. "I was blindfolded when they took me there, but I could see beneath the bandage—there is a secret door in here."

Her voice trailed back to the men in the living room, for she had thrown open the hall doors and was on her way to that room at the end of the hall where San Toy had delivered her to Jimmy and the Texas Kid.

The long leaders followed close behind. They wanted all the evidence of Buckwell's perfidy that could be secured and surmised that a secret room would be an excellent place to gather evidence against him.

For the first time during the interview, Buckwell lost his self-possession. He cursed Dolores with a vehemence that was worse than anything the white bosses had ever heard, and even they were not unskilled in an irreverent use of English. Overpowered by the combined strength of his captors, Buckwell was unable to resist. With a poor grace he suffered himself to be conducted to one of the two secret entrances that lead to his shrine room. It was well for the future of Jimmy and the Texas Kid that Buckwell was not able to lay his hands on them for their negligence in permitting Dolores to gain a knowledge of her surroundings.

"Here it is!" she cried happily when her hands found the same spring in the woodwork that Jimmy had pressed to open the hidden entrance.

A dark foreboding interior opened up before the astonished men gathered behind Dolores. But without hesitancy she led them down the mysterious stairway and called out a warning when they reached the great iron door that blocked their progress. The fifty foot passage was dotted with men who still held Buckwell prisoner.

Dolores' small white hands fluttered searchingly over the surface and lingered around the heavy hinges.

"I can't open it," she cried in alarm. "I can't find the spring."

Many other hands, both yellow and white, came to her assistance and exploringly covered every inch of the door's surface, searching for the secret spring that would give them entrance. They could not locate it.

"The men who brought me down touched something on this side—about here," explained Dolores as she reached up and pressed against the big metal hinge.

Immediately more matches flared in the darkness, but eager fingers searched in vain.

"How do you open this fool door?" demanded Brandon of Buckwell.

The designer of the secret contrivance shrugged. He was enjoying a growing sense of security. He was confident that Dolores and the men would never discover the opening spring. The door above closed automatically and was locked behind them. They were prisoners in the passageway. He would never lead them to the surface again until he had their written assurance that they would not proceed any further against him.

The surmise of Dolores was in itself insufficient proof to convict him, but if they once reached the shrine room there would be ample evidence. As the minutes passed and the door still defied their efforts Buckwell became more confident and self-assured.

"I regret that my guests must be so crowded," he commented with sneering politeness. "But remember, you are here from your own choice, and right here you will all stay until I have your promise that the matter we recently discussed upstairs shall be forgotten."

It quickly dawned on the waiting group in the secret passage that they had placed themselves again in Buckwell's power. Their anxiety to reach Terry had been the reason, and now they were separated from him, they were sure, only by the trick door which refused to open to their many attempts.

"They opened it right here. I know they did," insisted Dolores working untiringly to locate the hidden spring.

The flickering light of the matches revealed many tense faces, but it was the tenseness of anxiety rather than fear. Anxiety for Terry. Buckwell's face beamed with silent enjoyment. He was pleased that his accusers had played so conveniently into his hand.

"Something clicked!" cried Dolores.

They stood silent while the heavy door mysteriously opened. Buckwell cursed and frantically attempted to break away, but his captors cursed back at him jeering with scorn as his face suddenly turned pallid from fear.

The handsomely appointed shrine room was revealed to their curious eyes. The secret of Buckwell was a secret no longer.

San Toy sprang up in alarm from her watchful position in front of Terry and the signal light that meant his death. She stood with upraised dagger, ready to thrust the weapon into the body of the first man who approached her prisoner.

SEC. OF NAVY STRIKES BACK AT HIS CRITICS

DEFENDS ADMINISTRATION'S 74 SHIP NAVAL BUILDING PROGRAM

MAKES SPEECH AT MCKINLEY REPUBLICAN CLUB OF BAY CITY, MICH.

Bay City, Mich., March 7.—(UP)—Secretary of Navy Wilbur struck back at critics of the administration's 74-ship naval building program in a speech to the McKinley republican club here last night.

He asserted it was congress' constitutional duty to provide "adequate" auxiliary surface craft, but made no mention of the house bill providing for only 16 such ships.

He denied the navy was "lobbying" or "propagandizing" for the large construction program.

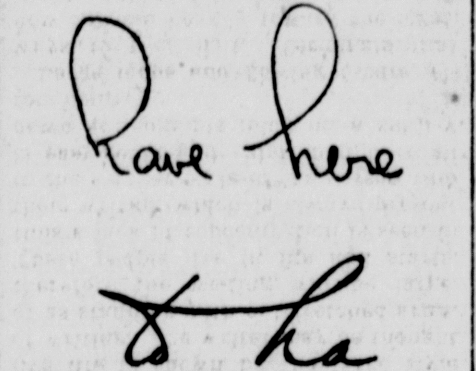

Wilbur said the department's program merely "considered our needs" for national defense and peace time commerce, and avoided naval competition. He cited the spread of piracy in Chinese waters to show the need of guarding commerce.

He said the capital ships permitted under the Washington treaty were useless without auxiliaries to "protect, serve and co-operate with them."

Is He Dramatic?

This quality brings one from behind the scenes or out from under his "bushel." Public life always awaits the dramatic person. Look for these signs in the writing:

A great love of life and desire to live life is shown by the large style of writing. The writer may be thought of as standing with outstretched arms, therefore the writing will be large. These people live in fits and starts, thus a lack of concentration is seen in their writing which is always present in the smaller style of the person who is easy-going and calm enough to sit down and pin his mind on a subject for hours.

Large loops and flowing t bars, always to the right. Terminals that flow far and heavily toward the right. Writing that shows signs of having been written hastily—all of these signs are to be found in the writing of the dramatic type.

Writing is uphill and downhill alternately, hopeful and depressed, all in the same moment. I dots often forgotten.

Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied. (Copyright.)

SYNOPSIS

As a white boss of Frisco, Buckwell seeks to secure valuable ancestral Vasquez property. His lawyer's nephew, Terry, loves Dolores Vasquez and exposes Buckwell's nefarious plans. Buckwell attempts to wreck their love affair. Vasquez dies of stroke when Buckwell rudely confronts him. Dolores and Terry expose Buckwell as Chinaman in effort to avenge Vasquez's death. Buckwell kidnaps them and threatens Terry with torture unless Dolores denies Chinese accusations. She appears before large body of men and lies about Buckwell to save Terry. Buckwell triumphant.

Before Lu Fong could reply the white bosses returned Buckwell's smile with relief and nods of approval. As they crowded around to extend congratulations on his vindication Buckwell swaggered forward and offered his hand.

The long men stared into space or whispered to each other. They were unable to believe their ears. Lu Fong approached Dolores with a deadly, threatening look in his eyes. But she had even forgotten that he was in the room. As soon as Buckwell left the light button to reveal in the plaids of his associates Dolores swiftly protected the fatal switch with her own hand and electrified every man in the room by crying out:

"Hold Senor Buckwell! He is a Chinaman!"

Buckwell whirled with both arms outstretched and, pushing aside the

"Hold Senor Buckwell! He is a Chinaman!"

men who surrounded him, made for Dolores.

"Don't let him touch me!" she cried in terror, her hand covering the switch protectively.

Buckwell was seized by strong hands on all sides. His struggles were futile, yet he retained a fine air of injured dignity. "The girl is demented. Let me have her taken to her room," he said.

But for once no one believed Chris Buckwell. He found that his political contemporaries were holding him prisoner in his own home.

"That is not true. I am perfectly sane!" defended Dolores, her eyes shining and her cheeks red with excitement. "He made me lie to you. He said that if I told the truth again he would press this light switch!" she pointed to it as if it were a poisonous scorpion.

"which would be the signal for Terrence O'Shaughnessy's death." Her eyes sought Brandon, and she continued, "Terry is bound and gagged down stairs in a torture chamber."

Every white and yellow man in the room knew that Dolores had told the truth. Buckwell glared at her with murder in his eyes, but was prevented from reaching her, or the switch, by the restraining hands of the men who had him safely plied in a big chair.

Every Chinaman smiled broadly in unrestrained satisfaction, disclosing shiny white teeth. Lu Fong's very expression asked Dolores' pardon for having doubted her. But of all those present Brandon was the most violently affected.

"You — dam scoundrel, where is that boy of mine?" he demanded.

It is a strange trait of human nature to protect one's kin in dire extremity, no matter how indifferent one may have been to them when things were running along smoothly. Brandon was not an exception to the rule.

Buckwell calmly returned Brandon's glare. "Find him!" he hissed. It was a challenge.

A dead silence followed the announcement. "He is in a secret room," Dolores hastened to explain. "I was blindfolded when they took me there, but I could see beneath my bandage — there is a secret door in here."

Her voice trailed back to the men in the living room, for she had

thrown open the hall doors and was on her way to that room at the end of the hall where San Toy had delivered her to Jimmy and the Texas Kid.

The long leaders followed close behind. They wanted all the evidence of Buckwell's perfidy that could be secured and surmised that a secret room would be an excellent place to gather evidence against him.

For the first time during the interview, Buckwell lost his self-possession. He cursed Dolores with a vehemence that was worse than anything the white bosses had ever heard of and even they were not unskilled in an irreverent use of English. Overpowered by the combined strength of his captors, Buckwell was unable to resist. With a poor grace he suffered himself to be conducted to one of the two secret entrances that lead to his shrine room. It was well for the future of Jimmy and the Texas Kid that Buckwell was not able to lay his hands on them for their negligence in permitting Dolores to gain a knowledge of her surroundings.

"Here it is!" she cried happily when her hands found the same spring in the woodwork that Jimmy had pressed to open the hidden entrance.

A dark foreboding interior opened up before the astonished men gathered behind Dolores. But without hesitancy she led them down the mysterious stairway and called out a warning when they reached the great iron door that blocked their progress. The fifty foot passage was dotted with men who still held Buckwell prisoner.

Dolores' small white hands fluttered searchingly over the surface and lingered around the heavy hinges.

"I can't open it," she cried in alarm. "I can't find the spring."

Many other hands, both yellow and white, came to her assistance and exploringly covered every inch of the door's surface, searching for the secret spring that would give them entrance. They could not locate it.

"The men who brought me down touched something on this side — about here," explained Dolores as she reached up and pressed against the big metal hinge.

Immediately more matches flared in the darkness, but eager fingers searched in vain.

"How do you open this fool door?" demanded Brandon of Buckwell.

"The designer of the secret contrivance shrugged. He was enjoying a growing sense of security. He was confident that Dolores and the men would never discover the opening spring. The door above closed automatically and was locked behind them. They were prisoners in the passageway. He would never lead them to the surface again until he had their written assurance that they would not proceed any further against him.

The surprise of Dolores was in itself insufficient proof to convict him, but if they once reached the shrine room there would be ample evidence. As the minutes passed and the door still defied their efforts Buckwell became more confident and self-assured.

"I regret that my guests must be so crowded," he commented with sneering politeness. "But remember, you are here from your own choice, and right here you will all stay until I have your promise that the matter we recently discussed upstairs shall be forgotten."

It quickly dawned on the waiting group in the secret passage that they had placed themselves in a trap in Buckwell's power. Their anxiety to reach Terry had been the reason, and now they were separated from him, they were sure, only by the trick door which refused to open to their many attempts.

"They opened it right here. I know they did," insisted Dolores working untiringly to locate the hidden spring.

The flickering light of the matches revealed many tense faces, but it was the tenseness of anxiety rather than fear. Anxiety for Terry. Buckwell's face beamed with silent enjoyment. He was pleased that his accusers had played so conveniently into his hand.

"Something clicked!" cried Dolores.

They stood silent while the heavy door mysteriously opened. Buckwell cursed and frantically attempted to break away, but his captors cursed back at him jeering with scorn as his face suddenly turned pallid from fear.

The handsomely appointed shrine room was revealed to their curious eyes. The secret of Buckwell was a secret no longer.

San Toy sprang up in alarm from her watchful position in front of Terry and the signal light that meant his death. She stood with upraised dagger, ready to thrust the weapon into the body of the first man who approached her prisoner.

SEC. OF NAVY STRIKES BACK AT HIS CRITICS

DEFENDS ADMINISTRATION'S 74 SHIP NAVAL BUILDING PROGRAM

MAKES SPEECH AT MCKINLEY REPUBLICAN CLUB OF BAY CITY, MICH.

Bay City, Mich., March 7.—(UP)—Secretary of Navy Wilbur struck back at critics of the administration's 74-ship naval building program in a speech to the McKinley republican club here last night.

He asserted it was congress' constitutional duty to provide "adequate" auxiliary surface craft, but made no mention of the house bill providing for only 16 such ships.

He denied the navy was "lobbying" or "propagandizing" for the large construction program.

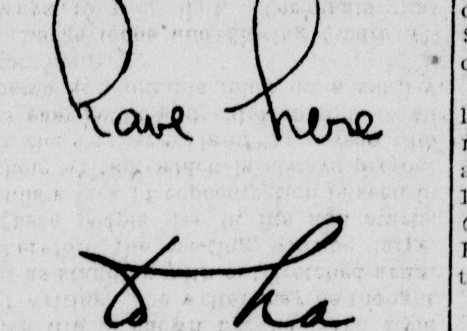

Wilbur said the department's program merely "considered our needs" for national defense and peace time commerce, and avoided naval competition. He cited the spread of piracy in Chinese waters to show the need of guarding commerce.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting

By EDNA PURDY WALSH Editor, Character Reading Magazine.

Is He Dramatic?

This quality brings one from behind the scenes or out from under his "bushel." Public life always awaits the dramatic person. Look for these signs in the writing:

A great love of life and desire to live life is shown by the large style of writing. The writer may be thought of as standing with outstretched arms, therefore the writing will be large. These people live in fits and starts, thus a lack of concentration is seen in their writing which is always present in the smaller style of the person who is easy-going and calm enough to sit down and pin his mind on a subject for hours.

Large loops and flowing t bars, always to the right. Terminals that flow far and heavily toward the right. Writing that shows signs of having been written hastily—all of these signs are to be found in the writing of the dramatic type.

Writing is uphill and downhill alternately, hopeful and depressed, and in the same moment, I dots often forgotten.

Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied. (Copyright.)

Armistice Car

The car in which the armistice was signed on November 11, 1918, is now housed in a building erected for this purpose at the great crossroads in the forest of Compiegne where the peace rendezvous was kept. It contains the same table, chairs, blotters and pens with which the German emissaries and Marshal Foch signed the armistice.
